Whole Harbor Wellness (WHW): Two Separate Website URLs — Retail and Wholesale Partner Platforms

We need to develop two separate URLs for Whole Harbor Wellness (WHW): one dedicated to retail customers and one dedicated to approved wholesale partners. Although both websites will represent the same company and share the WHW brand identity, each must serve a different audience, display different pricing, and provide different purchasing functionality. The purpose of this structure is to protect our pricing strategy, maintain control over who receives wholesale access, and create a retail customer experience that can also attract and recruit new partners.

1. Retail Website — Public-Facing WHW Website

The first URL will serve as the primary public-facing WHW website. It should be accessible to the general public and designed for individual customers who want to explore our offerings and make retail purchases.

Required features and functionality:

- Retail pricing: Display individual vial pricing only. Retail customers should not see wholesale kit pricing, partner discounts, or other wholesale purchasing information anywhere on this website.
- Retail purchasing: Provide a straightforward shopping experience that allows eligible customers to browse available offerings, review product information, and purchase at the established retail price, subject to applicable legal, clinical, and product-sale requirements.
- Partner opportunity section: Include a dedicated section explaining the opportunity to partner with WHW, the benefits of joining our network, and the resources we provide to help partners grow. These may include personalized partner landing pages, dedicated referral links, marketing materials, business development support, and tools to track eligible customer activity and sales.
- Partner application: Include a clearly visible link to a partner application where interested individuals or businesses can submit their information for consideration.
- Application review and approval: Submitting an application must not automatically grant wholesale access. WHW will review applicants and approve partners based on established eligibility criteria, business suitability, audience or customer reach, and alignment with our business model. We anticipate that many partners will be selected directly by WHW leadership through existing professional relationships.

- Brand and company information: This website must also function as the main WHW corporate website, introducing the company, explaining our approach to wellness, presenting our brand and mission, and providing relevant contact information, policies, and customer support resources.

Potential partners may include yoga studio owners, yoga instructors, fitness trainers, wellness coaches, spas, and other established businesses or professionals with relevant services and trusted customer communities.

2. Wholesale Website — Private Partner Purchasing Platform

The second URL will serve as the dedicated wholesale purchasing and partner resource website. It will be designed specifically for approved WHW partners, not the general public.

Required features and functionality:

- Wholesale kit pricing: Display wholesale pricing for qualifying kits, with each kit containing 10 vials. The wholesale pricing structure should offer an attractive business opportunity compared with the individual retail pricing.
- Wholesale purchasing: Allow approved partners to purchase eligible kits under the applicable wholesale terms. The purchasing process should be designed around partner orders rather than individual retail purchases.
- Restricted access: Wholesale prices, purchasing functionality, and other confidential partner information must not be publicly accessible. The developer should implement a secure login and approval-based access system so that only WHW-authorized partners can view wholesale pricing and place eligible orders.
- Partner account management: Where feasible, provide approved partners with account access to relevant order history, purchasing information, partner resources, and other tools appropriate to their role.
- Partner resources: Include the information and tools partners need to understand the WHW program, access approved marketing materials, and manage their relationship with the company.
- Company and brand information: This website should also function as a complete WHW website for the partner audience, providing relevant company information, brand messaging, partner program details, policies, and contact information. The content can overlap with the retail website, but the focus should be on the needs of approved partners.

3. Why We Need Two Separate URLs

Keeping the retail and wholesale platforms separate is an intentional business decision, not simply a design preference.

Our retail customers will purchase individual vials at the established retail price, while approved wholesale partners will purchase kits of 10 vials at a substantially more favorable wholesale rate. If both price structures are visible on the same public website, retail customers may bypass the intended retail purchasing model or become reluctant to purchase individual vials after seeing the wholesale pricing.

We also want to protect the value of our partner network. Wholesale access is intended for qualified businesses and professionals who bring established services, relevant expertise, customer relationships, or a trusted community to the WHW ecosystem. We want to build relationships with partners who can create mutual value—not provide unrestricted wholesale access to anyone who visits our website.

The goal is to make retail purchasing simple and accessible while making wholesale purchasing exclusive, controlled, and beneficial to approved partners.

4. Important Technical Requirement: The Two Sites Must Work Together

Although the sites will use separate URLs, they must operate as two connected parts of the same WHW business. We want a consistent brand identity, coordinated product information, reliable order management, and a clear process for moving qualified applicants from the public website into the approved partner program.

Please account for the following:

1. Shared administration: WHW administrators should be able to manage partner approvals, pricing, product information, and relevant website content without having to maintain two completely disconnected systems.
2. Approval-based access: Once an applicant is approved, WHW should be able to activate their wholesale account and provide secure access to the partner website. Rejected, pending, suspended, or revoked accounts must not have wholesale purchasing privileges.
3. Separate pricing controls: Retail and wholesale prices must be managed independently, with safeguards against wholesale pricing appearing on the public retail site.

4. Partner tracking: Where applicable, partner referral links and eligible sales attribution should continue to work across the relevant customer journey. The developer should explain how this will be implemented across the two URLs.
5. Security and privacy: Partner accounts, customer information, order records, and any restricted information must be appropriately protected.
6. Scalability: The structure should allow WHW to add new products, partner categories, pricing tiers, and partner resources as the business grows.

5. Expected Deliverable

Please propose the best technical approach for building and managing these two separate URLs. We would like your recommendation on whether the sites should share a backend or commerce platform while maintaining separate public-facing experiences, pricing rules, and access permissions.

Before implementation, please confirm how you will handle the retail and wholesale checkout flows, partner applications and approvals, secure wholesale access, pricing separation, and cross-site partner tracking.

The final result should be two distinct website experiences under one WHW business: a public-facing retail website that generates customers and attracts potential partners, and a restricted wholesale partner website that supports approved partners and protects our wholesale business model.
